With more than a decade in the market, TerraMaster has ample experience in high-capacity storage devices. It's a Shenzhen-based company, giving them first access to lots of hardware that runs out of the tech city. Synology is one of the most well-known NAS brands and one I've tested myself extensively. I've built a DS718+ from an "out of the box" blank shell to offer everything from basic storage extension to Cloud access and running multiple Virtual Machines (VMs). In the market for over two decades now, they have built a business entirely around network ac Quality Network Appliance Provider sounds a bit cliché, probably why they typically present themselves simply as QNAP. This company has been around for almost as long as Synology has and today serves a global market. Headquartered in Taiwan, QNAP offers solutions for everything from home to enterprise. For those of you who are guessing about the name, yes, Asustor is an offshoot of AsusTek, the computer hardware manufacturer. It was founded in to be the storage-specialized arm of Asus and has been doing a roaring business since then. This brand of storage manufacturer likely needs little introduction. It's one of the kings of mechanical storage and branched out somewhat into the NAS market. The brand did raise a slight stink with the SMR-drive debacle but is still a good choice for reliable storage.
